

Dear Jamie,

I hope this letter finds you well! It's been a while since we last caught up, and I wanted to share some exciting updates about what I've been up to lately. Over the past couple of months, I've picked up a few new hobbies and they've really added so much fun and color to my everyday life.

Firstly, I started painting! At first, I was a bit nervous since I hadn't tried it since school, but now I find it really relaxing and a great way to express what I'm feeling. I even completed my first landscape painting last week – you have to see it the next time you visit!

Alongside painting, I've also started gardening. To my surprise, taking care of plants is both rewarding and calming. Watching my little flowers and herbs grow each day has made me appreciate nature even more.

Oh, and guess what? I've also begun learning to play the guitar. I can now strum a few basic songs and I'm having a blast experimenting with different tunes. Maybe one day, I can serenade the family at our next get-together, though I do need a lot more practice!

I would love to hear what new things you've tried lately or what keeps you busy these days. Let's catch up soon and maybe even try one of these hobbies together!

Looking forward to your reply.

Lots of love,

Alex
