

Informal Letter to a Friend: Sharing Summer Holiday Experiences

Hey Sara,

How have you been? I hope this letter finds you well and enjoying your break! I couldn't wait to tell you all about my summer holiday-it's been such an adventure, and I kept thinking how much you would have loved being here with me!

This year, my family and I went to the seaside in Lombok. The beaches were simply breathtaking-clear turquoise water and soft, white sand everywhere. Every morning, we woke up early to go for a swim or just walk along the shore, collecting seashells. One day, I even tried paddleboarding for the first time! It was hilarious-I fell in so many times, but I finally managed to stand up and glide a bit. I wish you could have seen it; we would've laughed so hard together!

We also visited a local market, which was so colorful and lively. There were stalls selling fruits I'd never seen before, and we tried these delicious snacks made from coconut and sticky rice. It was fun bargaining with the vendors, though I still think I paid too much for a souvenir bracelet!

The highlight of the trip was snorkeling in the coral reefs. The underwater world was amazing-I saw clownfish, starfish, and even a small sea turtle swimming by! It felt like I was inside a real-life aquarium. I couldn't stop smiling the whole time.

After all these awesome activities, my favorite part was just sitting around a bonfire under the stars, listening to the waves and chatting with my family. I had a lot of time to relax and think about things, and I realized how much these simple moments mean.

I really missed having you around to share all these experiences. We have to plan a trip together next summer! Tell me all about your holiday, too-I can't wait to hear what you've been up to.

Take care and write back soon!

Your friend always,
Anna
