

Hey [Pen Pal's Name],

How's it going? I hope you're doing well and having an awesome week. I was thinking about our last conversation about books, and I realized I just have to recommend a science fiction novel that totally blew my mind!

The book is called Dune by Frank Herbert. I know, everyone talks about it, but there's a good reason! The world-building is seriously next-level—it's set on a desert planet with giant sandworms, mysterious politics, and a fight for control over a super-valuable resource called spice. I loved getting lost in the blend of adventure, futuristic technology, and the crazy amount of imagination that went into every detail. Plus, the characters are really interesting—you never quite know who to trust!

I think you'd really get into the way the story explores big ideas like survival, loyalty, and the environment. If you decide to pick it up, let me know what you think. And if you have any other sci-fi recommendations, I'd love to hear them!

Happy reading and write back soon!

Your friend,
