

Dear [Friend's Name],

Hey! I hope you're doing well. I just had to write and tell you all about the amazing cultural festival we had at school last week-it was absolutely unforgettable!

The whole school was buzzing with excitement, and every classroom was decorated with colorful banners and art from different countries. There were stalls everywhere, each representing a different culture with fun activities and traditional clothes. I got a chance to try making Japanese origami (which turned out lopsided but still kind of cute!) and even tried on a beautiful sari from the Indian stall.

The highlight had to be the performances in the auditorium. There were dance routines from Latin America, African drumming and singing, and even a traditional Chinese lion dance. Everyone was cheering and clapping along-the energy was contagious! I felt so proud of my classmates who performed; they were incredible.

And of course, the food was out of this world! I tried sushi, samosas, churros, and so many other dishes from around the globe. I don't think I've ever been that full at school before!

I loved learning about different traditions and sharing stories with friends. It really opened my eyes to how diverse and vibrant our school community is. I wish you could have been there-you would have loved it! Maybe next year, you can come as my guest.

Write back soon and let me know what's new with you. Miss hanging out!

With lots of love,
[Your Name]
