

Dear [Friend's Name],

I hope this letter finds you well! It's been a while since we last caught up, and I've really missed our chats. I'm writing to you because you've always given great advice and I find myself in need of some guidance.

Lately, I've been seriously considering starting my own small business. It's an exciting idea, but also a bit nerve-wracking, as there's so much to think about. Since you have some experience in this area, I was hoping you could share some of your wisdom with me!

If you have the time, I'd love to hear any advice you might have about getting started—things like coming up with a solid plan, where to look for funding, and how to figure out what kinds of marketing actually work. Were there any unexpected challenges when you started your business? Is there anything you wish you'd done differently?

I'd really appreciate any tips or recommendations you might have, even if they seem small. Your honesty and practical perspective would mean a lot to me as I figure this out.

Thanks so much for taking the time to read this. Let's catch up soon over coffee, too—I'd love to hear how you're doing!

Take care,
[Your Name]
