

Hey Alex,

I hope you're doing well! I just had to write and tell you about something new that's got me really excited-I've picked up painting over the past few weeks! It all started when I stumbled upon an old box of watercolor supplies in my attic, and I thought, "Why not give this a shot?"

Honestly, I'm loving it. There's something incredibly peaceful about mixing colors and letting my imagination run wild on a blank sheet. I've mostly been painting simple landscapes and flowers so far, but I'm hoping to get better with practice. Even when my paintings don't turn out perfect, I still have a great time and I feel so much more relaxed afterwards.

I remember you mentioning that you enjoyed drawing, so I thought maybe you'd like to try painting with me sometime! We could set up a little art session at the park-or even just at my place with some music and snacks. Let me know what you think! I'd love to share this new hobby with you and see what you come up with.

Hope to catch up soon!

Take care,
Jamie
