

Hey [Recipient's Name],

I hope this letter finds you well! I just wanted to drop you a quick note as your final exams are getting closer, and remind you of how amazing you truly are. I know how stressful this time can be, but I have complete faith in your abilities.

Remember, it's normal to feel nervous before big tests—everyone does! Try to channel that energy into your studies, but also make sure you're giving yourself plenty of breaks. Short walks, snacks, or just listening to your favorite song can do wonders to clear your mind.

When you're revising, try switching up your subjects every hour or so. Sometimes, explaining difficult topics out loud (even to yourself or the wall!) can really help everything click. And don't forget to get enough sleep—pulling all-nighters isn't as effective as you might think!

If things ever feel too overwhelming, take a deep breath, close your eyes for a moment, and remind yourself how far you've come. You can do this! You've worked so hard all year, and this is your chance to show it. Trust your preparation, believe in yourself, and just give it your best shot. That's all anyone can ask for.

No matter what happens, I'm super proud of you. Remember, exams are important, but they don't define who you are. Keep your head up, stay positive, and know that I am cheering for you all the way!

All the best—you've totally got this!

Your friend,

[Your Name]