

Dear Jamie,

How are you? I hope this letter finds you well. I just couldn't wait to tell you all about my winter holidays-they've been amazing so far!

Last weekend, right after the first big snowfall, my brother and I rushed outside to build the biggest snowman in our yard. We managed to give him a carrot nose and dressed him up with Dad's old scarf. Our fingers felt frozen by the end, but it was worth it!

Afterward, Mom made us her special hot cocoa. We warmed up by the fireplace, sipping our drinks and listening to the crackling wood. It's the best feeling in the world, especially after playing outside in the cold.

One afternoon, our family went skating at the frozen pond down the road. Some of our friends joined us too, and we had races and tried to do little tricks, even though most of us just ended up in giggles after falling.

We've also spent lots of cozy evenings indoors-playing board games, making cookies, and watching classic holiday movies. I love these moments with everyone together, laughing and sharing stories.

I wish you could come visit and join in the fun! Let me know how you're spending your winter break. I miss you and hope to hear all your adventures soon!

Stay warm and take care,

Alex
