

Dear Grandma and Grandpa,

I hope this letter finds you both in good health and spirits. I am writing to you today to share something that has been bothering me lately. My recent exam results were not as good as I had hoped. I know how much you care about my studies, so I wanted to be honest with you about how things have gone.

This term was quite challenging for me. I tried my best, but I struggled with a few subjects, and I made some mistakes during the exams. I realize now that I could have managed my time better and asked for help sooner when I found things difficult. I was quite disappointed with myself, but I want you to know that I am not giving up.

I have already spoken to my teachers, and they have given me advice on how to improve. I've also made a study plan so I can focus on my weaker areas and do better next time. I promise to work harder and not repeat my mistakes. Your encouragement always motivates me, and I hope you can still be proud of me for being honest and determined to do better.

Please don't worry about me. I have learned a lot from this experience and it has made me realize the importance of asking for help and working consistently. Your love and support mean the world to me, and I am grateful for your understanding.

I hope to visit you soon and hear your stories and advice. Give my love to everyone at home.

With lots of love,
