

Hey [Classmate's Name],

I hope you're doing well! As summer break is approaching, I've been thinking about how we can use the time to get ahead with our studies, especially with those tricky subjects coming up next semester.

How about we organize a study group over the summer? We could meet a couple of times a week, either at the library or maybe even at someone's house. I was thinking we could focus on [Subject 1], [Subject 2], and anything else we find challenging. It would be a great way to help each other out, share notes, and stay motivated.

Let me know what you think and if you'd be interested. We can also invite a few other friends who might want to join. Just imagine how much easier it'll be to tackle those tough topics together before classes start again!

Looking forward to hearing from you!

Take care,
[Your Name]